

Box Office Bombs

Box Office Bombs is a fun and addicting web game that gives you two film options to choose from and you have to guess whether the one on the right had higher or lower monetary success than the one on the left.

Box Office Bombs is a simple JavaScript web game that asks the user to choose either “higher” or “lower” based on two film options and you have to decide which one made more money in the theater, otherwise known as the box office. If you choose the correct option then you will get 1 point and another film will pop up for you to compare it to the previous winner. In order to continue advancing, you have to get each option correct, when you get one wrong the game will end. The addicting nature of the game comes from the user wanting to constantly get a higher score, so they continue to play and play.

Personas

Avid Movie Watcher

User of the site to test their knowledge

Casual Web Gamer

User who plays for the goal of getting a high score

Competitors(Site is an original idea, so there aren't competitors)

